

Nhan Tran currently leads and supports several Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission (CNSC) initiatives on innovations, including working groups on internal applications of innovative approaches to regulatory activities and the assessment of CNSC readiness to regulate disruptive, innovative and emergent technologies.

Nhans decade of experience with CNSC covers all aspects of operational activities, including licensing and compliance, policy and regulatory framework, technical assessment and strategic planning and outreach.